Background

Lafarge Surma Cement Ltd. is a joint venture of LafargeHolcim, a world leader in building materials and Cementos Molins, a Spanish Company with strong global presence. The plant of Lafarge Surma Cement, which is located in Chhatak Sunamganj is the only fully integrated dry process cement plant in Bangladesh where high premium quality clinker (a semi finished product needed to produce cement) and cement are produced utilizing sophisticated and state-of-the-art machineries and processes. The Company's ability to produce its own clinker under its strict quality supervision and the presence of an international standard Quality Control and Monitoring Lab ensures the same consistent premium quality in each and every bag. Lafarge Surma Cement sources its primary raw material limestone from its own quarry in Meghalaya, India. This limestone is brought to the Plant using a 17 km long conveyer belt. Lafarge Surma Cement Ltd. wholly owns a subsidiary company Lafarge Umiam Mining Private Ltd. (LUMPL), which is registered in India and operates the quarry in Meghalaya. To support this unique cross border commercial venture, the two Governments of India and Bangladesh signed a historic agreement through exchange of letters in November, 2000.

Lafarge Surma Cement will continue to strive to come up with range of products and solutions that will convert architectural dreams into realities and provide the building blocks for a modern and beautiful country.
