Background

Veolia and Grameen Health Care Service created in 2008 a new social business named Grameen Veolia Water Ltd. Its objective is to distribute drinking water to poor people of Bangladesh living in arsenic contaminated and rural areas. Since the signature of the Joint Venture Agreement, a plant has been created and a 15 km network have been implemented, serving more than 7,000 inhabitants. In 2017, 200 water accesses are used by the local population to drink WHO standard water instead of arsenic contaminated one.
